and 7,535 were left for settlement to the hureaux généranx. M. Jules Limon has called attention to certain defects in the present constitution of these councils which would seem to require reform. Since the suppression of articles 415 and 416 of the penal code, which occurred some time agn, there has been a great increase in the number. of trade disputes, and in consequence there are more opportunities, and imland necessity, for the exercise of the jurisdiction of these courts. those for Paris act not only for Paris, where alone there were in 1860 550,280 ouvriers, but for the whole department of the Scine. Yet they are only four in number, and, since every trade is represented in this city, the prodroumes often find themselves judges in disputes. of which they have no technical knowledge, or that they are employers or workings in some opposing branch of industry. It is argued, herefore, that the number of the councils ought o receive a considerable addition. Thea, ugora, there is the question of pay. By law the patrons, give their services gratuitously, and it is left; optional to give the ouvriers indemnity or otherwise. At Lyons the latter receive a sum of about £40 annually; at Ronen, Nantes. Rout seems obviously unfair that men who depend r their breed on their daily labours should be refet of the Seine has accordingly proposed that they should in future receive five fraues or each sitting of the court. But a difficulty has arisen in respect of this which will sound oddly in English cire. The Paris prud'hommes ouvriers, "animated by a tentiment of legitimate pride," refuse to accept it unless the patrons receive the same amount, and this not from generosity to the patrons, but in order that there may be preserved an pperent equality. We say apparent because. though they may both receive the same wagen

in the shape of the five francs, not even the law can alter the fact that one man is rich and does not require it, and that the other is poor and cannot do without it. Moreover, since the expenucs fall on the local taxes, which, of course, ire partly paid by the poor, this sentimental pride may be legitimate, but scarcely appears. onsiderate or judicious. As the law stood originally the prud hommes patrons were to have one more representative n the courts than the prud hommes ouvriers, but in 1848 liberty to make the numbers equal was accorded, and a provision was afterwards introduced that the president, who has a coating. yote, and the vice-president should be named by the Emperor, while the prefet is to select he secretary. It is not necessary that such president should be chosen from the prud hom . mee, and if by accident the president and vice should be absent, their places must be tempo-rarily filled by a patron. It is urged that consequently there is in many cases a majority of two ugainst the ourriers; that the patrons tovers, while the ouvriers only assess and endorse and that the offect of this arrangement is greatly to shake public confidence in the juspartiality of these courts. On the other hand, it is arged the Government use the power wisely, and that in Paris the president is selected alternately from each division, but that in the provinces the onwriers are not soadvanced in intelligence as to fit them to act as presideuts. Besides employers and workman, there are two other classes, namely, foreman and workmen who work on their own account, and for want of classification these are incligible for election. This is an arrangement which might he easily amended. M. Jules Simon also contended that the election of prud hommes was not aufficiently representative and popular, because no ouvrier could vote unless ile" livret" or passbook was en règle, and that this rule should be abolished. The workman's "livret" is a kind of passbook, in which are inscribed the age, residence, and personal description of the ouvrier, with the particulars of apprenticeship, by whom employed, and for how long, together with his character as furnished. by each master. It is maturally not a very popular institution among the auvriers, least of all with the bad ones, though it is in force in Germany and in most of the continental Status, except Belgium. But if it is of any value at all in formishing a good workman with a good character and good references, it is surely valuable as a proof of his fitness for being an elector; whereas, if it is of no use one way, it is of still less use the other, and might judicionally be entirely done away with. To maintain vexatious

By H.M.S Pearl, from Nagasaki on the 28th ultimo, which arrived yesterday, we learn that Captain Swan, of H.M.S. Rattler, died at Yokohama towards the end of last month. It is understood that Admiral Sir H. Keppel's Flag Lieutenant will be promoted to the vicancy. H.M. ships Surpent and Saloin, and U.S. ships Ashnelot, Outsord, and Right were in Nagasaki when the Pearl left. The Junho is a store-ship. just from the States, and although she was nearly five months on the passage, her log-book shows that during the voyage sho has reached as high a speed as eighteen and a-half hunds un-

Admiral Sir H. Keppel, with H.M S. Rochey, was expected at Nagasaki on the 20th ultimo. H.M.S. Oo an was still at Osaka. RUMOURED DISTURBANCES IN JAPAN, When the Pour left Nagasaki there was a report current that fresh disturbances had broken out at Kioto between the Japaness Princes, and that the British troups, numbering 800, were under orders for that place.

THE Times is weary at heart on account of the word " awfully which it calls a schoolboyish word. It is, and would like to get rid of it. If so, why did it and set its fice steadily against it at it the very infancy of the word, ten years ago, and me then strangle it in the cradie at first? did it not gromble at it with the help editorial to bay ? why not have hunched thunderholts at it, instead of keeping at for the review of an undergraduate's book in the latter days? May we tak, do undergraduates, who are a grawn up sort of creature after all, really use the ward "awfully" of in the sense of "very"—"very." pather, in full dress 7. If one of themselves says so, we suppose they do. Yet it seems more natural for an undergraduate to swear like his consin the trooper than to minee like Miss his sister. The word does not belong to the vocabulary of boybood either, with all due defference to the Times. It is a schoolgirl's idiom, not a school boy's; and the latter only comes to it by inflation and at second-hand. It is a ben word the ben of our fathers' more robust, expletive " denged" or " deviliab," just as" fib" is the hen of " he," and " poorly " is the hen of " seedy. The word cannot be stopped, It is natural, if not neeful, and it supplies a real want, the want of a tonic force or crutch for wealthy old adjectives or other worm out parts of speculi to be used as a common term by the youth of both sexes in places where they meet, such as the croquet ground and the five o'clock ten. A mun would be a limite to quarrel with the klicing of youth upon those occasions, where indeed, youth I is its own best idigm. "There's not a comp going," as Mr. Equeers says, " us line, half the fondness for youth that I have," and we, too, a, who love youth quite as much as that uninortal grammurian, find it a hard thing not to love the n rising generation of slang as well : for slang is n but the riotous boylood of speech.-Pull Mall
